-v-

Hon. Teresa K. Corrigan

JESSE FRIEDMAN,

Defendant.

AFFIRMATION OF BRUCE A. GREEN

1. I am the Stein Chair at Fordham University School of Law, where I serve as Director of the Louis Stein Center for Law and Ethics.
2. Counsel for Jesse Friedman in this case has provided information to me relevant to Friedman's prior and renewed motion for recusal of County Court Judge Teresa Corrigan, to whom the case is assigned, and has asked me to render objective opinions regarding the application of applicable judicial conduct rules and standards. I have not been, and will not be, compensated for my work, but render this opinion on a pro bono basis.
3. For the reasons discussed more fully below, my opinion is that the circumstances of this case give rise to the conclusion that Judge Corrigan should be recused under the applicable judicial conduct rules because her "impartiality might reasonably be questioned."

Qualifications

4. My qualifications to provide expert opinions on questions of legal and judicial ethics are set forth more fully in my curriculum vitae (Exhibit A).
5. Since 1987, I have been a member of the full-time faculty of Fordham University School of Law. I previously served as a law clerk to Judge James L. Oakes of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, as a law clerk to Justice Thurgood Marshall of the Supreme Court of the United States, and as an Assistant United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York. I am admitted to practice law in New York, the United States District Courts for the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York, and the Supreme Court of the United States.
6. I have regularly taught courses in legal ethics at Fordham and elsewhere since 1987. I speak frequently at CLE programs and have written extensively on various aspects of legal ethics. Among other things, I am co-author of a legal ethics casebook that is now in its second edition: Pearce, Capra, Green, Knake & Terry, PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY: A CONTEMPORARY APPROACH (2d ed. 2014, West Academic Publ.). As described below, some of my work in this field has related specifically to judicial ethics.

7. I have engaged in various other professional work relating to legal ethics, including on the national level. For over a decade, I have served on the committee that drafts the Multistate Professional Responsibility Examination, which includes questions that test familiarity with the ABA Model Code of Judicial Conduct. Previously, I served on the ABA Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility, during a three-year period when it was reviewing proposed amendments to the ABA Model Code of Judicial Conduct. I have also chaired the ethics committees of both the ABA Litigation Section and the ABA Criminal Justice Section, served on the ABA Litigation Section's Task Force on Settlement Ethics, served as reporter to the ABA Commission on Multijurisdictional Practice and to the ABA Task Force on Attorney-Client Privilege, and chaired the Section on Professional Responsibility of the Association of American Law Schools.
8. On the state and local level, I currently serve as a member and past Chair of the New York State Bar Association's Committee on Professional Ethics, as a member of the New York State Bar Association's Committee on Standards of Attorney Conduct, on the board of advisors of the Ethics Institute of the New York County Lawyers' Association and as a member of that Association's ethics committee. I previously served on the Departmental Disciplinary Committee of the New York State Supreme Court, Appellate Division, First Department (the court-appointed body that reviews and investigates ethics complaints against lawyers in New York), and on the ethics committee of the New York City Bar Association. I render opinions in this action in my individual capacity and do not speak on behalf of any of these or other entities.

9. With regard to judicial ethics in particular, my work has included: (1) undertaking principal responsibility for the chapter on "Special Ethical Rules: Prosecutors and Judges" in PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY: A CONTEMPORARY APPROACH, supra; (2) authoring or co-authoring several articles on judicial ethics; (3) twice teaching a seminar on "The Judicial Role and Responsibilities," and (4) organizing and speaking on a panel on "Issues in Judicial Ethics" at NYU's annual Appellate Judges Seminar in 2007 and 2008.

Relevant Facts

10. Friedman previously moved to disqualify Judge Corrigan or have her recuse herself under Article 2, Section 14 of the New York Judiciary Law, and under the New York Rules of Judicial Conduct, 22 NYCRR 100.3. Friedman's motion also cited due process cases dealing with actual bias as well as New York State cases urging judges to disqualify themselves where there is an appearance of partiality. On October 24, 2014, Judge Corrigan denied Friedman's recusal motion, stating that she had no knowledge of the Friedman case beyond what she had learned in the motion papers; that she had not known, worked, or socialized with Kathleen Rice at the Brooklyn DA's office; and that members of the DA's office who were involved in aspects of the Friedman case during or prior to Judge Corrigan's employment in the Office or were among the many who supported her candidacy and that she was unaware of the extent of their or others' campaign contributions. Friedman now renews his motion based, in part, on information provided in Judge Corrigan's October 24, 2014 opinion and other new information.

11. I have no first-hand knowledge of the relevant facts. For purposes of providing this opinion, I have reviewed the following: Friedman's June 2014 motion under CPL 440.10; the August 2014 motion to recuse Judge Corrigan; the September 2014 opposition to that motion; the October 2014 Order regarding that motion; the June 2013 Conviction Integrity Report (the "Rice Report"); and Ronald L. Kuby's affidavit in support of Friedman's renewed recusal motion.

I rely on the facts set forth in Mr. Kuby's affidavit, attached as Exhibit B.

Analysis

12. Section 100.3 of the NY Rules of Judicial Conduct requires a judge to recuse herself in any proceeding in which "the judge's impartiality might reasonably be questioned." The rule identifies particular circumstances in which recusal is required, including where "the judge has a personal bias or prejudice concerning a party," "the judge has personal knowledge of disputed evidentiary facts concerning the proceeding," and "a lawyer with whom the judge previously practiced law served during such association as a lawyer concerning the matter." However, the circumstances set forth in the rule are not meant to be exclusive.
13. The purpose of the recusal rule is not only to ensure that judges perform their work free of bias or favoritism but also to avoid the appearance of bias or favoritism.
14. Among the circumstances that may call for judicial recusal are where the judge has a relationship to a party, to a party's lawyer, or to other interested individuals or organizations that would give rise to a personal bias or favoritism, as well as where the judge has prior personal knowledge of evidentiary facts that could unfairly influence the judge's decisions and actions.

15. I assume that, as reflected in Judge Corrigan decision on the prior recusal motion, she recalls no discussion of the Friedman case during her years in the DA's Office, and that she does not perceive that her associations with others in the DA's Office will adversely affect her fairness and impartiality in this case. Further, I recognize that prior service as a prosecutor does not in itself require recusal from cases brought by the prosecutor's office, even if the cases were pending while the judge served as a prosecutor. (This is an exception to the general rule that a judge must recuse herself from all cases pending in her former law office while she was in its employ.) On the other hand, it is obviously not the case that a judge who formerly served as a prosecutor is entirely excused from the recusal duty in particular criminal cases in which the judge's "impartiality might reasonably be questioned." In this case, in my judgment, combined circumstances bear on the appearance of bias or favoritism. It may be that no one circumstance, standing alone, would require recusal under the specific provisions of the recusal rule. But taken together, in my judgment, the considerations described below raise reasonable questions about Judge Corrigan's impartiality and therefore require her recusal.

The Court will be asked to rule on the propriety of the conduct of the Nassau County DA's Office, including its conduct during the period when Judge Corrigan was employed as a supervisor there, and on the propriety of the conduct of four individuals in the Office with whom Judge Corrigan had close professional dealings, two of whom are presently her jointly-represented co-defendants in a civil lawsuit.

16. This case involves not only the guilt or innocence of Jesse Friedman. It also involves serious allegations of misconduct by the Nassau County District Attorney's Office and Police Department. This is obviously a highly significant as well as highly visible matter for the DA's Office, which has devoted significant resources over more than a decade to contesting Friedman's efforts to obtain the details of the investigation that led to his conviction and to defending the Office against Friedman's challenges to police and prosecutors' conduct. In effect, Friedman's allegations are two-fold.

17. First, it is alleged that the District Attorney's Office wrongfully pressured Jesse Friedman to plead guilty to serious charges through a pattern of police and prosecutorial misconduct. The alleged wrongdoing during this period included: the use of improper and unduly coercive methods of questioning, the failure to record or properly memorialize witness interviews, including those containing exculpatory information, the abuse of the arrest power to arrest individuals known to be innocent to coerce a guilty plea, and witness coercion. Joseph Onorato was the prosecutor during this period. The allegations against him include: the failure to reveal the existence of exculpatory material, witness coercion, and the placement of unreliable evidence in front of a grand jury in order to compound charges and force a plea arrangement.

18. Second, it is alleged that the District Attorney's Office has covered up and compounded its prior misconduct throughout the period from 2004 to the present during which Friedman has sought to overturn his conviction, including the period from 2006 to 2014 when Kathleen Rice headed the Office, and during the period from 2006 to 2012 when Judge Corrigan served as one of Rice's supervisors. The allegations include: intentional misrepresentation of witness testimony, intentional concealment of exculpatory evidence, the manufacturing of additional accusatory material and a general failure to fulfill the obligations it placed upon itself to reasonably investigate Friedman's record of conviction.¹

19. In particular, a central premise of Friedman's case is that the factual conclusions in the Rice Report are incorrect and that its preparation was not the product of an objective investigation but a procedurally and substantively defective one; that it was undertaken as part of the Office's ongoing effort to cover up its prior misconduct and avoid the reputational damage that would result from having Friedman's conviction set aside; and that the Report should be discredited. Meg Reiss and Charles Ribando were members of the team that produced the Rice Report.

¹ From 2004, when Friedman first challenged his conviction, to the present, the DA's Office has had an ethical, if not constitutional, obligation to disclose exculpatory evidence that had not previously been made available. See Warney v. Monroe County, 587 F.3d 113, 125 (2d Cir. 2009) ("The advocacy function of a prosecutor includes seeking exoneration and confessing error to correct an erroneous conviction. Thus prosecutors are under a continuing ethical obligation to disclose exculpatory information discovered post-conviction."). Suppressing exculpatory evidence post-conviction is a potential basis of civil liability. See Houston v. Partee, 978 F.2d 362 (7th Cir. 1992). Among Friedman's assertions is that the DA's Office, to this day, has endeavored to suppress exculpatory evidence in its possession, and that its opposition to freedom-of-information and discovery requests furthers this endeavor.

20. The Court in this case will be asked to pass judgment on the conduct of the investigation and the prosecution that led to Jesse Friedman's guilty plea.

21. The Court will also be asked to pass judgment on the conduct of the investigation and the prosecution during the period from 2004 to the present during which Jesse Friedman has sought to set aside his conviction. In particular, the Court will be asked to pass judgment on the Rice Report and the work producing it, and the Court has already done so. The Rice Report is in effect the District Attorney's Office's public statement on the Friedman matter. It was submitted in this case, and the District Attorney's Office referenced it throughout its opposition to the motion to overturn the conviction. Moreover, the Order dated December 23, 2014 relies at least in part on credibility determinations made within the Report. Even if it were not submitted, and merely existed in isolation away from consideration of this matter, judgments on this matter will inevitably be considered judgments on that Report.

22. During the period when she served in the District Attorney's Office, Judge Corrigan was closely associated with four of the individuals whose conduct is seriously implicated by the Friedman case: Kathleen Rice, the District Attorney who hired her and headed the Office; Meg Reiss and Charles Ribando, to whom Judge Corrigan reported; and Joseph Onarato, whom she supervised.

23. Three of the four were apparently contributors to Judge Corrigan's judicial campaign, including Meg Reiss, who apparently was her largest contributor.
24. Two of the four, Kathleen Rice and Charles Ribando, are co-defendants with Judge Corrigan in the Sanseviro case, and the three of them are jointly represented. (The record does not reflect the extent, if any, to which Judge Corrigan will interact with Ms. Rice and Mr. Ribando in the context of the lawsuit against them, but wholly apart from any personal engagement, their legal interests are presumably bound together in the context of the lawsuit.)
25. The DA's Office and the four above-noted individuals with whom Judge Corrigan was associated in the Office are not nominal parties in this case but they have a great deal at stake professionally and reputationally, including possible risk of disciplinary and civil liability, depending on the result of the Friedman proceedings. Judicial rulings on discovery may lead to either suppression or disclosure of new evidence that would substantiate Friedman's claims of misconduct. Judicial rulings regarding the conduct of the original investigation and prosecution and regarding the post-2004 measures undertaken by the Office and its prosecutors may either vindicate or embarrass the Office and its representatives, including former DA Rice.

26. These circumstances cast serious doubt on Judge Corrigan's impartiality because they provide a strong motivation to favor the DA's Office and her prior associates in the Office when she makes rulings regarding the propriety of the prosecutors' past conduct, especially when the conduct occurred during the period when the judge served in the Office. I recognize that the mere fact that Judge Corrigan was a prosecutor for approximately six of the years during which Friedman has been seeking to overturn his conviction is not enough in itself to require the judge's recusal. But this is an extraordinary case in which the credibility of the DA's Office and the judge's former close associates is under attack. Judge Corrigan has reason to be personally concerned about some or all of the four above-noted individuals whose conduct is implicated, because she presumably worked closely with all four as supervisee or supervisor; one (DA Rice) hired her; three supported her campaign financially; and two are her co-defendants.² Further, the judge's own reputation may be affected in part by public perceptions of the DA's Office during her time of service. If prosecutors in the Office are found to have advocated unfairly to preserve a wrongful conviction, the Office will be brought into disrepute, and the reputations of those such as Judge Corrigan who served in the Office during the relevant time period may be tarnished indirectly as a result.

Because Judge Corrigan served as a supervisor in the DA's Office while significant prosecutorial conduct occurred in this highly-publicized, highly controversial matter, one might presume that she discussed the matter, notwithstanding her contrary recollection, and that she acquired other relevant extrajudicial knowledge.

² This last relationship was not addressed in Judge Corrigan's prior recusal decision. I understand that judges may be required to recuse themselves when they have a business relationship with party in a case, and that one might argue that Ms. Rice and Mr. Ribando have interests in this case equivalent to that of parties, and that their legal relationship as jointly-represented civil co-defendants is equivalent to that of business partners. However, I have not undertaken to consider whether, standing alone, the relationship with Kathleen Rice and Charles Ribando, as jointly-represented co-parties in another case, in and of itself requires recusal.

27. As a general matter, the law presumes that lawyers in a law office discuss their ongoing cases.³ There are no reasons why, from the public's perspective, the presumption would not apply here. Nothing in the record reflects that prosecutors in the DA's office did not generally discuss the Office's cases, or that its prosecutors avoided discussing the Friedman case in particular despite its notoriety and public visibility. Nor does anything in the record suggest that Judge Corrigan individually was screened, or screened herself, from discussions of the Office's work outside her own unit while she was employed there.

28. This was a highly publicized, controversial case during Judge Corrigan's tenure in the DA's office. The Second Circuit's ruling in Friedman v. Rehal was, if not unique, extraordinarily unusual. It caused DA Rice to convene a panel and reinvestigation that was apparently unprecedented in Nassau County. There was also significant press coverage both locally and nationally.

29. The DA's Office was significantly engaged in this matter during Judge Corrigan's service there, first, in defending Friedman's appeals, and second, and more broadly, in investigating the case through the efforts of senior ADAs within the Office. The resulting Rice Report and appendix is a voluminous product which evidently involved a significant effort by multiple personnel within the Office over an extended period of time.

30. Judge Corrigan's position as supervisor would presumably have led to her interaction with individuals who were personally involved in the Friedman case either previously or at the time.

31. That the case involved the conduct of police and prosecutors would have made it a particularly interesting topic of conversation.

32. Under these circumstances, informed members of the public would reasonably presume that, as a prosecutor, Judge Corrigan had conversations with colleagues about the Friedman case that would have afforded extrajudicial knowledge and that, even though she does not now recall such conversations, Judge Corrigan would have formed impressions that will influence her present perception of the case. Beyond that, it may be presumed that Judge

Corrigan acquired extensive knowledge of the Office's relevant personnel and inner workings that, although not relevant in most criminal cases, would bear significantly on this case insofar as Friedman challenges the conduct of the DA's Office.

Conclusion

33. This case has been going on at great length and considerable expense in the public eye. The Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in Friedman v. Rehal, 618 F.3d 142 (2d Cir. 2010), based on the evidentiary record in proceedings in which the DA's Office participated, raised substantial concerns about the reliability of Friedman's guilty plea and the fairness of the investigation and prosecution that led to it. It is obviously important that the public have confidence that the current proceedings, which ideally will resolve those concerns one way or the other, are conducted fairly and impartially. There is a significant risk, however, that the informed public will lack confidence in any judicial rulings and resolutions adverse to Friedman, not because of the evidentiary record, but because of Judge Corrigan's associations with the DA's Office and its key personnel, whose conduct is seriously in issue in this case, including their conduct regarding the Friedman case during the period when Judge Corrigan worked with them as a supervisor or supervisee. I assume that viewed in isolation, none of the above-described circumstances require recusal under the specific provisions of 22 NYCRR 100.3. But the circumstances should be viewed in the aggregate, not in isolation, and measured against the basic tenet of the rule, namely, that a judge must recuse herself in any proceeding in which "the judge's impartiality might reasonably be questioned." The combined circumstances, which make this case highly unusual and certainly different from other criminal cases that will ordinarily come before the Court, raise a substantial appearance that the judge will favor her former Office and its personnel in her rulings and be influenced by information she learned and impressions she formed about Friedman's case while employed there.
